Graduate student Kaitlyn Kaufman is particularly proud of a holster she designed for “Bloody, Bloody Andrew Jackson.” It has a silk screen of the Constitution’s preamble, mixing the rock-star and political qualities of the title character.

Juveniles’ confessions often false

A probation officer searches a boy in Juvenile Hall in Orange.

Thirty-five percent of incarcerated male juveniles surveyed in California likely made a false admission of guilt to protect or feign ignorance, according to a recently published study co-authored by a UC Irvine professor.

Of those youths, 31.5 percent said they made a false confession to protect another person. Youth are generally more peer-oriented and thus more likely than adults to protect their peers. More than 13 percent of those interrogated by officers said the request was made by a family member or a lawyer present,” said Elizabeth Cauffman, UCI professor of psychology and social behavior.

Homicide victim’s confessions not always true

FBI Agent Jeff Lamoreaux searches a juvenile for evidence.

A false admission of guilt, said Elizabeth Cauffman, UC Irvine professor of psychology and social behavior. However, the study by Cauffman and her co-author, Pennsylvania professor Elizabeth Shulman suggests there is a wide range of factors that contribute to a child’s false confession.

There are so many different factors that go into juvenile crime compared to adult crimes,” said Cauffman. “Kids are still developing and changing at a very rapid rate.

Notably, there is no requirement for having a lawyer present when a minor is being interrogated.

A child can’t consent to a medical procedure. A child can’t consent to being part of any research study without parental consent. But a child can sit in front of a police officer and make the decision to waive his rights to not have a parent present or a lawyer present,” Cauffman said.

Orange County Sheriff’s Department lieutenant Jeff Hallick said that if a juvenile requests a parent or guardian during an interrogation, that request is granted. A juvenile is read their constitutional rights when arrested or detained and read a Miranda warning before interrogation to ensure they understand these rights, Hallick said.

The costume workshop is buzzing with excitement. Just days away from the first dress rehearsal of “Bloody, Bloody Andrew Jackson,” designer Kaitlyn Kaufman and the technicians are finishing up the odds and ends of her velvet do-it-yourself ensemble.

It’s sort of like Occupy Wall Street meets improvisation,” Kaufman said of the attire. “The Redcoats wear hoodies and we use bottle cap buttons. It’s really fun.”

The UC Irvine shop looks like something out of “Project Runway.” Sketches of visionary designs line the walls, unfinished dresses hang on mannequin bodies held together by pins and needles, and whimsical embellishments are being sewn on jackets.

Everyone is hard at work, focusing on their task to meet deadline.

The program is selective. Only two students are offered a spot annually, bringing a total of six in residence looking to receive a master’s degree from the campus.

HOMING THE CRAFT

Every year UC Irvine receives hundreds of applications from aspiring costume designers and technicians looking to receive a master’s degree from the campus. But the program is selective. Only two students are offered a spot annually bringing a total of six in residence at any given time.

ANTEATERS PICK UP THE PACE

With a quicker style of play, the women’s basketball team hopes to make a jump in the Big West standings.

Last season was a “true audition” for UC Irvine head coach Doug Oliver. A new group was his first year at the helm of the program in 2012-13, and the team strung together a 9-21 overall record. The season served as a learning experience for both the coaching staff and players.

Several seniors are back for this season’s team—all eight seniors from last year’s lineup, including more efficiently. “We really strived to score the ball,” Oliver said. “We weren’t a very good offensive team. Now we can play 30, 32 minutes. We can run the floor and kids are fired up to shoot the ball.”

Practices have simulated the new offense. Women’s college basketball uses a 35-second shot clock in practice, however, has practiced games situations using a 35-second shot clock and sometimes a 24-second shot clock. The Anteaters have been able to run situations by speeding up the pace of the practice so playing more efficiently. UCI returns the bulk of last year’s lineup, including seven seniors.

The team hopes to make a jump in the Big West standings. “I think that we can be a much more efficient offensive team,” Tsurumoto said. “We’d get frantic and tired, a couple minutes of the game, and we’d just collapse.”

The Anteaters are all ready off to a good start. They defeated South Dakota, 71-54, to kick off the season. It was their first non-conference win since 2002.

The Anteaters face a tough non-conference schedule, playing 12 of their first 14 out-of-league games on the road. The team will travel to Nevada, Colorado, Idaho, Montana and Washington.

Last year was unsatisfactory and the team is trying to make some gains,” Buckley said. “We want to prove to people that we’re not the worst team in conference. Last season was not how we normally play. We’re a much stronger team.”

A Christmas Carol

Based on Charles Dickens’ 19th-century masterwork “A Christmas Carol,” this production by Counter-Balance, an independent theater company that features Claire Trevor School of the Arts students in production, engages students in creating a theatrical version of “theatrical elements of ‘theatrical tradition’” using “an archetypal tale that promotes peace.”

On the 20th anniversary of the loss of language ability due to a stroke, UCI alumna Dr. Barbara Krauthammer observed that “words have power,” and that “UCI is such a diverse community that you have to make good happen.”

Theater brings many opportunities for students to develop critical thinking and coordination. Elboo Patel, host of the university of California, Irvine, says “There are a lot of opportunities for students to participate in interfaith cooperation and communication to achieve shared goals.”

At the screening of McIntyre’s film, McKean and Hickok drew a standing-room-only crowd in the von Hannover Auditorium. Admission: $15; $11-$15 for UCI students, faculty and staff. Information: 949-824-2848.

Elboo Patel encourages students to find common ground with each other. UC Irvine may have just gotten a bit more peaceful thanks to Elboo Patel, who has secured a position in the university’s arts landscape. Patel is the founder of the Interfaith Council, an organization that promotes peace in college campuses through interfaith discussions.

The most beautiful thing about a college campus is that there’s no place on earth where you go from an idea to a reality faster, Patel said. “UCI is such a diverse community that you have to make good happen.”

Elboo Patel says the future is bright for a student who spends four years at the University of California, Irvine.

UCI community raises funding with ‘Promise’

By ANNA ILLEF

As part of a unique fundraising initiative called Promise for Education, hosted by the University of California, California system, several members of the UC Irvine community raised about $40,000 for student scholarships.

Participants were encouraged to make a promise, reflective of their personalities, which they then fulfilled in a certain manner. For example, UCI Irvine trustees promised to run a marathon, while students promised to participate in a service project. The money raised was then allocated to scholarships.

The “Promise for Education” campaign took place from Sept. 18 through Oct. 4, although donations are still being accepted. During the six weeks, the university raised more than $10 million through nearly 1,000 promises. Donations will directly fund student scholarships at the UCI campuses across the state.

“At UC Irvine, we know many qualified applicants who lack the resources to take advantage of the outstanding opportunities our campus offers that are available for all,” Drake said in an official UCI release. The Promise for Education raises funds to bridge this gap.

Alumni Notes

SHARING A DECADE OF DINNERS

There’s nothing like getting together for some good food and fellowship ever since. UCI Irvine alumni Dan Fanous couldn’t agree more.

For the last 10 years, Fanous, class of ’94, has been hosting dinner parties for UCI Irvine students as part of the Dinner for 12 Anteaters program organized by the UCI Irvine Alumni Association.

Each year, Fanous opens up his Irvine home to share his personal experiences as a way to connect with students.

Although the event is focused around enjoyable conversation, the connections made are truly what Fanous came to bring for the event.

“My advice,” said Fanous, “is to not really worry about the meal. They just want to hang out and meet alumni.”

This year, 271 alumni and undergraduate students participated in the Dinner for 12 Anteaters program organized by the UCI Irvine Alumni Association.

“The stronger and more prestigious an institution is, the more my desire,” said Fanous, “is to have a huge alumni base. I think that’s really important to for building those relationships so that those students come to UCI Irvine they know that they’ve got alumni that can help them (and co-workers) and serve as mentors.”

Fanous stays in touch with student he’s hosted to offer career advice and mentorship. “Students need to have someone to rely on,” said Fanous. “It’s a rolling point for a university. Therefore, more prestigious the university is, the more my desire is to have a huge alumni base.”
